

Rampier
Introductory Sentence (7)

This is a collection of resources for a conjectural reconstruction of a portion of the Doroughtmore Monastic depression <sup>in</sup> the tuatha lands of Mysra, of the people of the Mysraighle and others among them.

The Rampier of Aghabullaghe and the gabion of Peake (Péicín) and the souterrain of a chain doithe! A land of Ogham stones and souterrains and their great monastic houses.

(23)
a deneme of chains, hills Cuide plots, of <sup>green</sup> deserts (dysarts) <sup>mounts</sup> and bogs and thorny places, of ridges and valleys, of pastures and plains, of woodlands and orchards, of ploughlands and farrans, of cures at the wells of saints and saints beneath the ground in <sup>prayer</sup>, of burials and family remembrances;
of a greatness of medical wonders beneath the feetfalls of a wanderer in the field at harvest-time; to be
'Rambling in the New Mown Hay',

---

